Immigrant Politics: Race and Representation in Western Europe

TERRI E. GIVENS AND RAHSAAN MAXWELL, EDITORS

“Reveals the character, aspirations, challenges, and complex politics that lie at the intersection of race and representation in Western Europe.” —Erik Bleich, Middlebury College

Do ethnic minority politicians play a meaningful role in Western Europe? How do European publics feel about nonwhite politicians? How are political parties reaching out to ethnic minority communities, and how do those communities feel about their political influence?

Addressing these increasingly critical questions, the authors of Immigrant Politics explore the realities, possibilities, and problems of ethnic minority and migrant political participation in Western Europe. Their combination of thematic chapters and country studies provides a thorough overview of the politics of race and representation in the region.

Terri E. Givens is associate professor of government at the University of Texas at Austin. Her publications include Voting Radical Right in Western Europe and the coedited Immigration Policy and Security. Rahsaan Maxwell is assistant professor of political science at the University of Massachusetts, Amherst. He is author of Integration Tradeoffs: Ethnic Minority Migrants in Britain and France.
